RESEARCH | PUBLICATION | PORTFOLIO-BASED DOCTORATE DEGREE PROGRAMMES

PROGRAMME SPECIFICATION

D.B.A. | Ed.D. | Psy. D. | D.Man.

Ranked No. 85 among top business schools in the world for 2019

Programme Overview

Doctorate-through-Research (DTR) and/or Doctorate-through-Publication/Portfolio (DTP) programmes allows those professionals who have not followed the traditional academic route toward a doctorate degree to nevertheless obtain the highest academic recognition for having undertaken and produced practically-based innovative research, and independently developed their research and other related analytical problem-solving skills and subject knowledge up to the doctoral level. This may also include professionals entering higher education in mid-career, especially in practice-based disciplines such as management, education, public health, psychology, business administration, commerce, law, sciences and many more.

Awards & Recognition

The following doctorate awards could be earned through the DTR or DTP options at EIU – Paris. The doctorate qualification is conferred by EIU - Paris; a French government recognized degree-granting body. The university is recognized by the French Ministry of National Education, Higher Education and Research, and is registered as a private higher education institute in accordance to and in compliance with the French Education Act: Code de l'Education Articles L 444-1 to 444-11 and R 444-1 to 444-28.

Requirements of the Degree

1. Substantial published work (published texts or creative output) that must be in the public domain prior to submission for examination for the award. Note that: The number of publications will depend on both the academic area and the type of publication included in the submission. Such publications may include academic papers, chapters, monographs, books, scholarly editions of a text, technical reports, creative work in relevant areas, or other artifacts.
2. Where the candidate is not the first author in co-authored papers and there is no published statement as to the contribution of each author, the extent of their contribution should be normally be certified by at least one co-author.
3. Normally, the majority of the publications should have been published, but it will be possible to include some publications which are in press or which have been accepted for publication.
4. Publications included in the submission for a Doctorate by Publication should not have been used in the submission for another research degree.
5. Publications should demonstrate that the quality, extent and level of research undertaken is at least equivalent to that expected of a traditional doctorate student who has reached the end of the writing-up stage.
6. An introductory section demonstrating that the published works contain unifying themes and comprise a coherent body of academic work that meets the requirements for the award of doctorate.

The introductory section should:

1. Set the published work or creative output in the context of existing literature and evaluate the contribution that the research makes to the advancement of the chosen subject or professional area.
2. Stress the coherence of the publications, linking them to the methodology adopted.
3. Demonstrate the acquisition and utilization of appropriate research skills equivalent to those of a traditional doctorate student who has reached the end of the writing-up stage.
4. Include a section relating to the candidate's research methodology. This is particularly relevant if detail regarding methodology is not included in the publications. The doctorate is about rigor of research process as well as the originality of the outcomes.
5. In cases where the works are jointly authored by the applicant and other persons, the introductory section should also describe the roles played by those joint authors, and contain percentage estimates of the applicant's input into each jointly authored work.

The Role of a Supervisor

The nominated supervisor will act in a similar role to that of a supervisor for a standard doctorate project, but with more emphasis on being a mentor to the candidate. They will act as a source of support and guidance during the preparation of the research material for examination (oral defense) and for administration of the examination (oral defense) process.

The supervisor will:

- Guide the candidate in the final selection of publications for inclusion in the submission;
- Support and advise on the development of the introductory section;
- Guide the candidate in relation to the coherence of the body of work to be submitted;
- Advise the candidate in relation to any research training requirements;
- Make arrangements for the examination (oral defense), including nomination of the examining team;
- Support the candidate through the examination (oral defense) process.

The Examiners' Main Tasks may be Interpreted as to:

- Evaluate the intellectual merit of the candidate's cited published and/or creative work;
- Establish if a satisfactory case is made for coherence between the publications/outputs;
- Assess the contribution to knowledge represented by the publications/portfolio and made apparent in any critical appraisal;
- Evaluate the rigor with which the candidate has contextualized and analyzed his/her publications/portfolio in any critical appraisal;
- Evaluate the appropriateness of the methods employed in the research and the correctness of their application;
- Assess the candidate's contribution to the various phases of the research embodied in multi-authored works;
- Establish the candidate's 'ownership' of the published work and appreciation of the state of [historical and current] knowledge within the candidate's research area;
- Assess the candidate's research skills in terms of his/her potential as a continuing, independent researcher.
